ONE DEAD, TWO INJURED IN LOON LAKE STORM

RALPH HENKLE IS FATALLY INJURED IN WRECKED HOME

Victim of Tornado Dies
In Waukegan Hospital
Tuesday

Loon Lake summer colony is a mass of ruins today with one dead and two others seriously injured as a result of a storm which swept its way across Lake County Monday afternoon.

Coming in from the south west, the tornado caught first the Borse Store at Loon Lake Corners and swung round the side of the lake to the northeast, picking up buildings as though they were toys and leaving destruction in its wake.

The cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Henkel was picked up and thrown down at a distance of 150 feet from the foundation with such force that it was dashed to pieces. Mr. and Mrs. Henkel were both in the house when the storm broke. They were rushed to the hospital at Waukegan where Mr. Henkel died on Tuesday evening. The more seriously injured of the two, he had a piece of board driven into his chest by the impact of the falling house and sustained several broken ribs besides other injuries. One of the broken ribs pierced a lung and from the first no hopes were held for his recovery. Mrs. Henkel, although suffering from several broken ribs and bruised and shaken by the impact of the storm, is thought to have escaped without fatal injuries. That she escaped at all is miraculous, as the cottage in which they were injured is so badly shattered that the parts of the building and even the furniture and furnishings are indistinguishable.

Cot Saves Life of Woman.

Mr. and Mrs. Henkel had gone upstairs on the approach of the storm to close the windows, and so quickly did the storm come up that they were caught part way down the stairs in the stairway when the force of the tornado hit the house. Mrs. Henkel was saved from immediate death by an overturned cot, which fell over her body and protected her from the heavy timbers of the house. Mr. Henkel was caught between two of the timbers and pinned beneath a mass of debris.

Walter Dibble who lives near by discovered their plight and went to their rescue. Mr. Dibble had been attempting to reach his own home when the storm broke and was forced to seek shelter until the storm abated. In passing the debris where the Henkel cottage had collapsed, he heard their moans, and he and his wife, who had come out of the cottage in search of her husband after the storm, succeeded in getting them free from the wreckage and helped them into the Dibble cottage. As all telephone communications were severed Mr. Dibble went at once to Waukegan and returned with the ambulance.

Among the injured was Myron Olcott, who was taken to Victory Memorial Hospital Monday afternoon suffering from a fractured limb and other injuries sustained when the barn in which he was working collapsed. Heavy timbers stunned Mr. Olcott and he was in a serious condition for a few hours following the accident.

FIREMEN ANSWER CALL TO LAKE VILLA THURSDAY

A defective chimney in the residence of John Myers at Lake Villa was the origin of a fire this afternoon and the cause of summoning the Antioch fire department. The flames were extinguished without the aid of the fire company, and the damage was estimated at about one hundred dollars. The property is owned by Fred Bartlett of Lake Villa.

Miss Pauline VanDuzer returned to Waukegan yesterday after spending a two week's vacation with relatives at Lake Geneva and Antioch.

Local High School Wins First Place In Illinois State Contest

Antioch Students Add Four Loving Cups to High School Trophy Collection

Antioch High School won first place in their class, Class C, at the state music contest held at Normal last Friday and Saturday. The victories which gave Antioch the loving cup awarded to the school having the most number of points were in ensemble events, the Boy's Glee club, the Mixed Chorus and the Orchestra each winning first. These three victories each netted the local school five points in the contest thus giving them 15 points, a larger number than was won by any other school competing in any of the classes.

First honors in Class B were won by Morris High School and in Class A by Joliet High School. A beautiful loving cup was awarded to the winners of first place in each class. Besides this, a smaller one was awarded for each first, so the local school brought home four loving cups from the contest.

The vocal work was under the direction of Miss Helen Bauck who trained the boys and girls glee clubs and the mixed chorus. The orchestra was under the direction of L. R. Stark. Besides the winning numbers the girls glee club competed and Louise Simons, soprano; Virginia Hachmeister, contralto, and Homer Tiffany, baritone competed the solo contests. Miss Lila Hawkins gave an oration in the public speaking group.

About 45 Antioch students made the trip and took part in the contest. Sixty schools and 600 students participated.

Monday morning the students staged an informal celebration of their victory, but the real celebration will be held Friday evening at the Music Festival. At that time the prize winnings numbers will be repeated as part of the musical program.

The winning of this contest is an honor of which the school and community are justly proud. It represents faithful work on the part of the local faculty and students and adds one more victory to the long list already to their credit.

DESPONDENCY DRIVES SUMMER RESIDENT TO TAKE OWN LIFE

Instant Death Follows as Victim Takes Cyanide
of Potassium

Despairing for her health and nervous over a medical examination which she was to undergo on Monday, Mrs. Otto Helwig, of Chicago, for many years a summer resident at Grass Lake, broke through a basement window Sunday and took potassium cyanide obtained from a supply kept there by her husband, a former jeweler, for use in cleaning jewelry.

Mrs. Helwig had been in ill health for some time and had told friends that she felt discouraged about her condition but members of the family entertained no suspicion that her despondency would lead her to attempt her own life. The Helwigs had just arrived Saturday from Chicago to open their home for the summer.

Death resulted instantly after the taking of the poison, the body was badly bruised from climbing through the basement window, having been found beside the bench where the bottle was lying. The draught taken by Mrs. Helwig would have been sufficient, according to physicians, to kill scores of people.

Inquest was held by Dr. Maurice Penney, deputy coroner, in the Lee Strang undertaking rooms here on Monday and the body taken to Chicago for interment.

Mrs. Helwig was 60 years of age and is survived by her husband and five children, all of Chicago.

Newly Purchased Plane Is Wrecked by Storm

The Curtiss airplane, newly purchased by S. Boyer Nelson of Antioch, was caught in the storm Monday and the plane itself was demolished. The motor was uninjured and it will be placed in a new plane, according to the present plans of the owner. The new plane was brought to Antioch Saturday by Pilot Vernon Ramsey of Waukegan, and it was planned to inaugurate an air taxi service here, several flights having been made Saturday afternoon and Sunday. The landing field used is just north of the Antioch Palace. The air service will be resumed as soon as a new plane can be procured and residents and visitors to this locality will again have opportunity to get a bird's eye view of the beautiful lake region.

Williams Bros. Store Recovers Stolen Goods

Edward White and Harry Foster, the two Chicago men caught in the robbery of the Williams Bros. store last Thursday were given a preliminary hearing in Lake Forest on last Friday, and are being held at Waukegan pending trial on the burglary charge.

The goods belonging to Williams Brothers which was in the possession of the two when they were taken into custody, was recovered by the local store. The men are wanted by Chicago authorities for several robberies in and near the city and will be arraigned when they have answered charges preferred by Lake county.

Former Antioch Boy Has Narrow Escape in Auto Accident

Lester Barnstable, formerly of Antioch and now of Chetek, Wis., had a miraculous escape last Wednesday evening when the car in which he was riding crashed into a guard rail and overturned, bringing almost instant death to his companion, Geoffrey Isaacson of Chetek.

The young men were returning home after a dance. In the heavy fog they missed a side hill curve and were thrown with such force against the rail that a heavy plank ran through the windshield and penetrated the body of Isaacson.

Barnstable was able to crawl out and run to a nearby farm house where a physician was summoned and help was obtained to get his companion out from under the overturned car. Isaacson died before the rescue was effected.

Barnstable who was shaken by the experience was taken to the Rice Lake hospital. His injuries were not thought to be serious and it was expected that he would be out in a few days.

VILLAGE EMPLOYS MOTOR COP

Motorists who are inclined to step on the gas will have to watch their step on Saturday of this week and thereafter, for Frank Valenta, motor cop, employed Monday by the village council goes on duty here Saturday.

Heavy traffic here during the summer months for several years past has necessitated the employment of a traffic officer. Valenta, an Ingleside man, was highly recommended by Sheriff Doolittle as having done very satisfactory service in Lake county for a number of years.

Valenta's salary is to be $175 per month.

ACCIDENTAL SHOT RESULTS IN DEATH OF CHICAGO MAN

Two Children Are Left
Orphans By Death of Father

While attempting to shoot a crow along the roadside, Frank Bogner, 4038 North Maplewood Ave., Chicago, accidentally shot and killed his companion, Conrad Bushmann of 3835 North Kedzie avenue, Chicago, here Sunday.

The two, with George Braun, also of Chicago, were returning to the city from the William Lasco farm near Channel Lake Sunday morning about eleven, after looking at some property on which they contemplated taking hunting rights. Bushmann, who was driving, called attention to the crow. Bogner, in the rear seat, picked up the gun and shot at it. Bushmann's surprised comment was the first idea any of them had that he had been shot. Upon discovering what had happened they hurried him to the office of Dr. H. B. Williams where he died a few minutes later.

Inquest Held Sunday.
An inquest was held Sunday evening at Antioch before Deputy Coroner Dr. Maurice Penney of Libertyville. On the testimony of the principals and of Wm. Lasco that the men were intimate friends, were never known to quarrel and that no antagonism existed between them, the coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental shooting and Bogner was released from custody.

Bogner, who was prostrated by the accident, remained ill Monday and took the body of his friend back to Chicago.

Bushmann, who was a carpenter, left two motherless boys, 11 and 12 years of age respectively. Bogner who was an employee of Bushmann gave assurance that he would assume the responsibility for the care of the two children and see that they had every opportunity it was possible for him to give.

Antioch Young People Give Mother's Banquet

The mothers of the community were honored at a banquet at the Episcopal Parish house Monday evening. Forty-two guests sat down to a three course dinner prepared by the young ladies, under the captaincy of Miss Pearl Monnier and served by the members of the Motherhood of St. Andrews.

Rev. Dixon, acting as toastmaster, first introduced Rev. A. M. Krali who spoke on the subject, "What the Fathers Think of the Mothers"; Mrs. J. J. Morley spoke on, "What the Mothers Think of the Children"; and Bud Van Patten spoke on, "What the Sons Think of the Mothers." Dan Pettit read an original poem, "Mother." Joseph Coyner of Chicago paid a glowing tribute to Motherhood.

After the dinner, Mrs. John J. Morley and Mrs. D. A. Williams entertained with a duet suitable to the day.

Antioch Favors Daylight Saving

Antioch favors the adoption of daylight saving time, according to a petition bearing 203 signatures for the plan as against 102 opposing it. Following a meeting of the village board Monday night when the petition which had been circulated by board members, was presented, Village Clerk Harry A. Isaacs communicated with authorities at Lake Villa, Ingleside, Grayslake and Fox Lake regarding the time change. A report from these towns is expected Tuesday, at which time a meeting has been called to decide the matter definitely.

The petition, which may be signed either for or against, has been left at the office of the Antioch News where any may sign if they desire.

H. S. COMMERCIAL AND AGRICULTURAL STUDENTS COMPETE

Will Try For Honors in Shorthand, Typing and Cattle Judging

Representatives of the Antioch High School are at Libertyville today to compete in the commercial contest given by the North West High School Conference. Contests are being held in first and second year shorthand, and first and second year typing. Prizes will be awarded for the best individual work and also for the best group.

Due to the fact that the Antioch high school commercial department only offers one year of shorthand and typing, students from Antioch will compete in the first events only. The typewriting team will consist of Marguerite Manzer, Jean Abt, and Louis Forbrick; the shorthand team of Irma Hanke, Anna Simonsen, and Mae Seborn.

In the district contest last Saturday Irma Hanke won second in shorthand and Anna Simonsen third. As they competed with 25 contestants and made such an excellent showing, it is anticipated that they will give a good account of themselves today. All of the typing contestants are winners of awards for speed and accuracy and should be able to help in gaining laurels for the school.

Four Contracts Let for Construction of Lake County Roads

Contracts were awarded last week for the improvement of four strips of county road. They were a distance of 1,512 miles between Round Lake and Long Lake, 3.84 miles on the Ivanhoe-Grayslake road, 5.614 miles on what is known as the Millburn road, in the towns of Warren, Lake Villa, Newport and Antioch, and a 40 foot bridge in Grant township, near Round Lake.

The contract for the stretch from Round Lake to Long Lake was awarded to the firm of McGugin & Vanderhayden, for $13,485; Frank Feutz and Co. were awarded the Ivanhoe-Grayslake job; the Iowa Bridge company bid $5,560.77 and were given the bridge job in Grant township; and the commission took the matter of the Millburn road under advisement in order to discover which of the two companies who were low bidders can be on the job to start the work at once. Darrow & Barron bid $127,504 on the job and S. J. Groves & Son submitted a bid of $121,335.77.

The Millburn and Ivanhoe-Grayslake contracts call for paving the roads with concrete to a width of 18 feet, while the contract on the stretch from Round Lake to Long Lake is for the grading and installing of culverts only.

FIFTY HOMES WRECKED AS TORNADO SWEEPS OVER SUMMER COLONY

$200,000 Loon Lake Loss
Brings County Total
To Half Million

Stores, homes, garages, barns, trees and all manner of small buildings were swept into the vortex of the tornado, which, rising out of the southwest, swept down upon the Loon Lake region at about four o'clock Monday afternoon and, in the few moments before its fury was spent, caused damage in excess of $200,000.

At the A. Borse store, a substantial cement block structure, the roof was torn off by the storm and the cement blocks dislodged and hurled with terrific force through the ceiling and the roof of the annex. The occupants of the store escaped by going into the basement. Furniture, dishes, and supplies were ruined by the falling blocks and the deluge of rain that accompanied the storm. The Borse loss is estimated between seven and ten thousand dollars.

Across the corner from the Borse store the frame building occupied by the Cernak store got off with slight damage, the chimney having been blown down and the roof slightly damaged. Here a garage in the rear was taken away completely and the cars within were left. One, a Ford sedan, was backed out of the garage by the whim of the storm, while the other was left standing as though nothing had happened.

The Soo Line shelter station and the oil station nearby were both blown away, together with a newly completed summer cottage belonging to Fred Wolf, and two barns and a garage on the John Wolf, Sr., place. The Wolf ice house was blown down, and the ice left standing with the sides of the building scattered in the field around it.

Besides the Henkel cottage, about 40 other cottages around the lake were either totally demolished or badly damaged. Loss in money is almost impossible to estimate and probably will be in the neighborhood of $200,000 as many of the cottages destroyed were valued from $10,000 to $15,000, and none of the cottages on the south side of the lake escaped without damage. Among the cottages destroyed or badly wrecked were those of C. H. Kessler and Charles Nelson, and the Klugemeister, Desk, and Taylor cottages, all belonging to Chicago people.

On the farm owned by Morley and Webb and occupied by the Sam Glassman family the two big barns, valued in the neighborhood of $15,000, were totally destroyed along with all of the smaller buildings. Several head of horses were in one of the barns, but Glassman and his sons were able to dig them out of the debris after the twister passed.

Damage Done Elsewhere
Much damage has been reported from the region between Lake Villa and Grayslake. A large barn belonging to Everett Fish was razed to the ground and Mr. Fish, who was in the barn when the storm broke, saved his life by rushing outside, where he clung to a post while the sections of his barn were whirled over his head as the storm rose. The barn on the Wilton farm opposite also was carried away. Russell, Libertyville, Deep Lake and Gages Lake all reported barns lost, houses unroofed, chimneys knocked off and windows blown out in scattered spots in their region.

The Bristol community was hard hit. Silos, barns, sheds, trees, were blown over. Telephone and electric light systems were put out of commission. No serious injuries were reported from the community.

E. E. Lehmann Estate Has Loss
The Ernest Lehmann estate at Sand Lake suffered heavy losses, aggregating between $25,000 and $35,000. Six garages, a number of smaller buildings, and the large green-

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING TOWNS

After several months of controversy between Wilbur Glenn Voliva of Zion City and the North Shore Line, the buses of the North Shore Line are again allowed to make regular Sunday and week day stops within the city limits.

The innocent bystander received one of the thrills attendant upon such an occupation last Friday in Waukegan. Four wagon loads of wild animals and snakes belonging to the Christy Brothers circus, which was showing in the city that day, failed to make the incline at Madison street and rolled rapidly backward down the hill and finally ended their wild flight in the Northwestern yards. Though the animals were as thoroughly frightened as the throng of curious people who had gathered, passers by vanished from the environs as if by magic. None of the cages were broken and the tractor driver in charge got his charges to their destination without more difficulty.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, May 1.

The Golden Text was from Proverbs 3:11, "My son, despise not the chastening of the Lord; neither be weary of his correction."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God, and not that he should return from his ways, and live? Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed, and make you a new heart and a new spirit; for why will ye die, O house of Israel? For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God; wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye." (Ezek. 18:23, 31-32).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "To the physical senses, the strict demands of Christian Science seem peremptory; but mortals are listening to learn that life is God, good, and that evil has in reality neither place nor power in the human or the divine economy." (p. 327).

The Fount of Glory

Real glory springs from the silent conquest of ourselves; and without that, the conqueror is naught but the vilest slave. Capper's Weekly.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamlin and Gordon, accompanied by Miss Mabel Scott, Miss Elsa Seeger, and Edwin Kapple, enjoyed a trip to Urbana and Champaign last Saturday, returning Sunday evening. They visited Lester Hamlin who is attending the U. of Ill. there.

Claire Sherwood's new home is being bricked up and is nearing completion.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Douglass of Chicago spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Douglas.

The storm of Monday did a considerable amount of damage in our community. The greatest loss is probably that of E. E. Lehmann, whose greenhouse was completely destroyed. The workmen who were there narrowly escaped being killed or seriously hurt. The barn on the Everett Fish place was almost totally wrecked, and a great deal of damage was done to the farm buildings on the F. Richards farm. The garage was wrecked, the roof falling on the car and destroying that. The roar which preceded the cyclone-like storm was terrifying and the wind, though it only lasted a short time, brought sheets of rain with it, uprooted many trees, and broke telephone and electric light wires. Workmen were out almost immediately repairing the damages. Mr. and Mrs. William Walker entertained several guests from Chicago on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hamlin moved last week to their new home which they have recently purchased in Waukegan. Mr. Hamlin has lived here for nearly forty years, and will be missed in the village.

Why Firestone GUM-DIPPED TIRES Wear Longer

WE recently were given the tremendous advantage of having the mammoth Firestone factories brought to us. In Tire Educational Meetings we were shown, by means of motion pictures, charts, tire samples and complete engineering data, the details of Firestone tire design and construction—and how Firestone and Oldfield tires and tubes are made in the world's most efficient and economical rubber factories.

Firestone pioneered the original low-pressure tire and made it practical by Gum-Dipping. The motion pictures showed us how the cords of the carcass are dipped in a rubber solution, thoroughly saturating and insulating every fiber of every cord with rubber. Simple demonstrations and tests illustrated the great advantage of this process, which supplies the extra strength to withstand the extra flexing strains of low-pressure construction—one of the reasons why Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires are establishing such unheard-of mileage records.

We learned why the Firestone Balloon Tread gives extra safety, comfort and long wear. We were shown why Firestone, from the very beginning, designed and continue to use the round Balloon Tread, minimizing "shoulder breaks", so destructive to tires. Excess rubber at the edges of a Balloon Tread is wasted—actually detrimental to tire mileage. In the Firestone Tread the small units and sharp projections are scientifically placed to permit easy flexing, resulting in extraordinary riding comfort.

Come in and let us put a set of these Gum-Dipped Tires on your car—you can forget about tire trouble. Quality is higher than ever before—prices are lowest in history. Buy now!

Standardization in Service

THE manufacturing of equipment for the Bell System was one of the earliest, and is now among the outstanding examples of the standardization and quantity production which are distinctive characteristics of American industry.

Quantity production for the nation-wide Bell System makes it possible to put into every item of telephone equipment better material and better workmanship, at a lower cost to the telephone user, than could otherwise be done. But the dominant advantage of uniform manufacturing, under standard specifications, lies in the improvement of the service.

Every transmitter in the System is designed to work in harmony with every receiver all over the land and to co-ordinate with all the complicated equipment and lines behind. All can function at full efficiency for they are designed and manufactured for that purpose. Standardization, not only of equipment but of operating methods, is the only basis upon which it would be possible adequately to meet America's need of a nation-wide, universal telephone service.

The Antioch aggregation staged a come-back last Sunday at Round Lake by taking the fast Renehan team in tow with a 7 to 4 score. The game was a closely contested one in which the Round Lake team failed to pull in runs at the right moment.

Lasco of Antioch led the offensive with a double, three walks and a sacrifice and Hostetter won the approbation of the grandstand with a spectacular running catch of a fly ball which headed off a couple of scores in the eighth inning. Smith hit the longest home run ever made on the Round Lake diamond, knocking out a drive over the dance pavilion in center field.

Britton on the mound for Antioch pitched top notch ball, striking out twelve men and walking no-one. In the ninth inning the Tigers succeeded in bringing in two scores but, with all bases full and two down, Britton was one lap ahead of them with three balls that Wagner could not see.

Altogether the locals showed much improvement in form over last Sunday's game, getting 9 bases on balls, 3 hit batsmen and 6 hits off the Renehan pitchers. Oldenburg of Waukegan umpired the game to the entire satisfaction of the participants.

Antioch will play the Keller Cartage aggregation of Waukegan at the local park at 3 p. m. (daylight saving time.) A good game is assured with a competent league umpire. Britton and Simpson are scheduled for the Antioch battery.

Heavy Hitting a Feature of Day

The Avon blue and Keller Cartage clouded the ball for scores of 17 and 16 respectively. The score looked anything but close up to the eighth inning when the Avon crowd brought up their end of an adverse 16 to 4 score by the addition of 12 runs. A winning run in the ninth tipped the game their way.

The Johns-Manville Fireaters piled up a tidy little score of 25 against the Foresters with an easy win in which the Catholic aggregation only managed to pick up 3.

West Side A. C. put in their bid for a 1,000 per cent by defeating the Boosters in a ragged game in which there were hits enough to go around, every man getting at least one.

is to have the services one half hour earlier. Holy Communion at 7:30, Sunday School at 9:00, Church service at 10:00. This will be the hours of service until further notice.

Sunday, May the 22nd, will be a service of Thanksgiving for Mr. Dixon's Ordination to Holy Orders. It is hoped that F. Neely of Cavalry church, Chicago, will be the guest on that date. It is the 5th Sunday and last Sunday in the Easter season of 1927 and has the name of Rogation Sunday, a Day of Prayer of the fruits of the earth. It is hoped that as many as possible will make use of the services in the church on that day. A light breakfast will be served in the Undercroft

Methodist Church Notes

"Did God Send the Cyclone?" is the subject for the sermon at the morning service at the Methodist Episcopal church. Reverend Krahli will throw light on this much discussed theme. Christian people who have an understanding of the working of God's mercy say "no". Others say "yes." Come out and hear the other man's view discussed. Also hear the chorus choir, which is already showing the thoroughness of Prof. Nielsen's training.

The evening service will carry the note of an evangelistic appeal to warm the hearts of followers of the Christ. The old fashioned religion is not dead. Religious experience is as active today as when Jesus walked among men.

CHAPTER XIV

Anyone watching Gull Island from the shore would have seen the yellow shape of one bright window set like a small golden square in the darkness. The bright window was Anne's and over against it Anne sat on the side of the bed looking at the floor. She sat perfectly still, held in a staring concentration of thought, reviewing the happenings of the night.

While Basset had talked to her she had accepted his theory. His belief in it had been so absolute and it was so plausible. Of course a person in her state might have imagined anything. And as she dwelt on the sentence to persuade herself, the vision of the dim shadowy room rose before her with the figure coming toward her from the darkness of the gallery, moving spritlike as an hallucination might move. But as the memory grew in vividness the shape took form and solidity, the slim boy's shape. She saw again its rapid advance, its sudden stoppage at her words, its lightning-quick turn and soundless flight. The snap of the closing door came to her mind as a last confirmation and she knew it was no delusion.

"I did," she said in a whisper, and raised her eyes as if confronting a doubter with the truth. "I knew it—I did see somebody."

Somebody? The word struck her ear with a startling effect, an effect of discovery, of impending disclosures. Her body shrank together as if in fear of them, her riveted glance grew fixed as a sleep-walker's. She lost all sense of her surroundings, her entire being contracted to a point of inner activity. Before that intensified mental vision a series of pictures passed like the slides in a magic lantern—Stokes' photograph, the worn, wide-eyed face of Sybil; Joe playing Sebastian, his costume, his movements, a replica of Viola's; the living room as they heard the shot, dusk falling outside; in the summer house—with its shrouding vines—it would have been almost dark.

Suddenly a recollection flashed up, clairvoyantly distinct—Joe at the flat trying to make Basset give him the part of Sebastian, halting Sybil's walk. That picture brought her to her feet, brought a smothered cry to her lips. The spots of light had faded, run together in a leaping illumination.

On the bureau lay the key of Joe's trunk that she had brought from his room after their last interview. She stretched it up and ran to the door, out of it, along the gallery. In Joe's room she turned on the light and unlocked his trunk. She went through it to the bottom looking for his Sebastian costume. It was gone, every appointment of it. She had not needed the proof, she knew that she would not find it, that it was Joe, dressed in that costume, Stokes had killed.

The rest of it—Sybil alive, hiding somewhere! She saw the gray dawn on the window—the night was over, the house would soon be stirring. She locked the trunk, turned off the light and stole out on the gallery. She did not go back to her room but kept on down the hall to the top floor staircase. Half way up she heard from the floor above a sound, so faint, so furtive, that it would only have been audible in the dead dawn hush. She made a rush upward, sending her voice, low-keyed but passionately urgent, ahead of her:

"Sybil, Sybil, if it's you, wait. It's Anne. I'm coming to help you."

The door of the bedroom opposite the stairhead was open. Against the pale light of the window, poised with one hand resting on the raised sash, was a boy's figure—surely the figure she had seen in the living room two nights before. It was so completely boyish, the cropped round head, the knickerbockers and belted jacket, that she could not yet be sure and went forward with shuddering gait, peering and murmuring fearfully:

"Sybil, it is you?"

The figure left the window, came nearer, silently, crouching, with a hand raised for caution. She saw the face then, plucked and haggard, strangely altered with the curling frame of hair clipped close, but still Sybil's.

It was so extraordinary—such a gulf of unknown happenings lay between them—that at first they said nothing. Anne spoke first.

"Joe," she said. "It's Joe that's dead."

"Yes. Do they know?"

"They know nothing. They think it was you. It's all over, Stokes has told. But, oh, what is it? I can't understand—it's like a fearful dream."

The words died away and a sudden violent trembling shook her. With the joints of her knees like water she sank on the side of the bed, gripping the other with her shaking hands, pulling her down beside her.

"Tell me, tell me," she implored.

"Why is he dead? Why did he pretend he was you? What was he doing?"

They sat, clinging together, two small huddled figures in the gray light. Though the house below was as silent as the "Gull" they spoke in subdued voices, question, answer, murmur. Each knew a different aspect of the story, brought her own knowledge of Joe's motives and actions. In that whispered exchange they pieced together the separate facts, combined them in coherent sequence and came to a final enlightenment.

Joe had met his death in his last effort as a police spy, his last effort to get the Parkinson reward. Leaving his room to come down and make ready for his departure, he had heard the voices of Stokes and Sybil in the living room. Sybil remembered Stokes' upward look and question about someone moving in the gallery—Joe creeping to concealment behind the arch. The nature of their conversation would have held him listening: here was his last opportunity to get the information he sought. He had heard the rendezvous in the summer house. Its open situation offered no hiding place outside, but knowing that it would be almost dark inside, he had conceived the idea of putting on his Sebastian costume and impersonating Sybil.

His room was next to Sybil's. He had heard her come upstairs and from his window could command the Point. When Sybil left it he had gone down, passed the balcony where Stokes was waiting, and hearing his following footsteps, moved with that close imitation of Sybil's gait to the summer house. There the dim light and the drooping curls of his wig enabled him to carry through the deception. Stokes' wild speech, followed by the drawing of the pistol, had terrified him. Confronted by a man armed and half mad, panic had seized him and he had made a rush from the place.

So Joe had died, a body clad in gala dress swirling out on currents that would never bring him back. Anne said nothing. She did not feel any special grief, or feeling of any kind. Too much had happened, she was bemused. She had a vague sense that in some future time, when she had recovered from her dulled and battered state, she might be sorry, cry perhaps. Her eyes fell on her hand with Sybil's clasped around it and the sight of the linked fingers roused her. She lifted her head and looked at the face beside her:

"But—but—why did you do all this?"

Panic Had Seized Him and He Had Made a Rush From the Place.

Hide, not say anything, let them think you were dead?"

"I wanted to get away."

"Get away! What for—where?"

"To Jim Dallas. I know where he is."

"You've known?"

"For a month. I've written him telling him I'd come if I could, if I ever could. Oh, but it's been hopeless. I was spied on, dogged, followed."

Her voice rose on a hoarse note, stopped, and after a scared listening hush, went on whispering: "I want to stay dead, never come to life here again. It's my chance—the only chance I'll ever have. You've found me now and I'll tell you everything." And she told Anne the story—the story that no one else has ever heard.

Since she had received his address the longing to join her lover had possessed her. She had written she would come, she knew he was waiting for her, but the watch kept upon her made any move impossible. Whatever her anguish, she could not risk her traveling life, whereabouts? If it had been only herself she would have dared anything. In this position, growing daily more unbearable, and suddenly came the means of escape. Tragedy, swift and terrible as a bolt from the blue, had been her opportunity, and she had desperately seized it.

From her window, after the interview with Stokes, she had seen Joe, in his Sebastian dress, pass below. She had known it was he because of the costume and was astonished, supposing him already gone. Stokes came into view following him and the startling idea seized her that he had mistaken the boy for herself. She had run to the door to go down and end the misapprehension, and then stopped—at close quarters Stokes would see who it was, and to let Joe—evil-tongued and hostile—discover their rendezvous, was the last thing she wanted. She went back to the window to watch the outcome and saw neither of them. This frightened her—the only place they could have disappeared to was the summer house. Stokes might say too much before he discovered his mistake, and panic-stricken she was about to rush out, when Joe ran from the doorway and the shot followed.

For a space—she had no idea how long—she was paralyzed, not believing her senses. She remembered moving back into the room and from there she saw Stokes issue from the summer house and flee to the shelter of the pine wood that told her what she had seen was real, a murder had been committed under her eyes, and she went to the door to go down. Holding it open she paused on the threshold, heard the voices below, heard Stokes' entering words and had made a forward step to run down and denounce him, when a sound from outside stopped her, Flora's cry that Sybil was killed.

It was that wild screaming voice that gave her the idea, sent it through her brain like a zigzag of lightning. While the people below made their clamorous rush from the house, she stood in the doorway, motionless in contemplation of the possibilities that opened before her. The excitement that had shaken her a few minutes earlier died, her mind steepled and cleared, she felt herself uplifted by an invincible daring and courage. There was no danger of a recovery of the body for she had heard from Gabriel and Miss Pinkney that bodies carried out on the tide were never found.

Alone on the second floor with little fear of interruption she had gone about her preparations at once. She had taken nothing from her own room but money from her purse (leaving a small amount to avert suspicion) the candles from the box on the table, a few crackers she had brought up the night before from supper, and a pair of scissors. Then going to Joe's room she had gathered the clothes he had discarded, lying ready to her hand on the bed—everything from the shoes to the cap—and stolen out and upward to the top floor. Here she had put on the clothes and cut off her hair—she showed Anne the ends of the yellow curls in her jacket pocket—hiding her own clothes in a box in the storeroom.

With the class play now in history, members of the Senior class are turning their attention to the preparation of class day exercises, which will be held Tuesday evening, June 7. This new feature of graduation was so successful last year that it has been decided to hold it in the evening for the benefit of friends of the class. Class day exercises include the class prophecy, class will and other humorous numbers, the humor being at the expense of the teachers. Class day furnishes the last opportunity for the graduates to turn the tables on their teachers.

Members of the Junior class are busy decorating the gym for the Senior prom, which will be held Friday night, May 29. Class colors are blue and white, and it is expected that the decorations this year will equal those of former years in attractiveness.

The first baseball game of the season will be played Wednesday with Genoa City on the Silverlake diamond. The prospective lineup and batting order for the high school lads will be: Haggerty, left field; Buffon, second base; Madden, catcher; Menier, third base; Kocol, as; Dix, right field; Schmalfeldt, center field; Haseh, first base; Runyard, pitcher. Two games will be played with Genoa City and two with Richmond. Other men who are in line to play are: Flegel, Bloss and Schreck.

The class play, "Blow Your Own

Horn," was exceptionally well attended and was a very finished production. The entire cast deserves personal mention for the ease and naturalness with which they portrayed the character parts assigned to them: Fred Foister, Gladys Buffon, Donda Tyler, Charles Jurevick and Lyle McDougall had difficult roles which they interpreted nicely. NATION PAYS TRIBUTE TO MOTHERS SUNDAY

May 8th, was Mother's Day. A nation-wide observance in honor of mothers had been observed in every section of the country. Men gathered together to sing the praises and exalt the virtues of Mother. Hearts long benumbed beneath the cold indifference of a callous world glowed last Sunday with unaccustomed warmth as they meditated in tender reminiscence upon the sweet and wholesome memories that cluster round the thought of home and mother.

Reverence a spiritual feeling that regards with mingled love and honor something that is sublimely beautiful and exalted, and brings upon us by contrast a sense of our own unworthiness and inferiority. This is why all men reverence good women, and hold motherhood in constant veneration. The purer the ideal of motherhood exemplified, the higher a mother is held in honor and the more sacred is the homage rendered to her by the grateful sons of men.

It is something more than a pretty sentiment that has inspired the observance of Mother's Day. It is a solemn admission on the part of those who direct the trend of national celebrations of the great and growing need of a more intensive cultivation of the ideal of motherhood. It is an expression of the aged old, time worn, and oft confirmed conviction that a country depends for its perpetuity and prosperity more on the purity of its ideal of home than upon the strength of its armies or the wealth of its treasury. Mother's Day is, therefore, a sign of the victory of the spiritual over the material, of the triumph of right over might, and in a sense of the conquest of sound standards of old fashioned morality over the pernicious principles of theories and faddists.

The wistful, haunting, longing in the old ballad has ever had a peculiar fascination for the average man. In the depths of his own soul, and in the quiet solitude of his heart, he pleads with childish eagerness, "Backward, turn backward, O time in thy flight, make me a child again, just for tonight." Time did turn backward last Sunday and made all men children again for a day. They were transported on Mother's Day back again to what must ever be for every normal man the sanctuary of his highest hopes, the shrine of his deepest devotion, and the first and strongest inspiration, his Mother's knee.

Happy shall we be as a nation if like children we learn there the precious lessons so lovingly imparted. The ideal of motherhood is one of the nation's strongest bulwarks. Her sweet influence penetrates everywhere and ennobles and inspires to great actions and heroic deeds. All our material prosperity must rest upon the strong foundation of pure homes, watched and tended by good mothers. Behind our far flung battle line during the war was an army of gray mothers waiting and praying for their boys across the sea, behind the clergyman in church, the nurse in hospital, the teacher in school, back of the statesman in the halls of legislature, the jurist in the court of justice, doctor at the bedside of the sick and dying, and the laborer at his bench or the captain of industry in his office, stands another figure that guided him in his early days of childhood, watched over him in the dangerous days of youth and now inspires him in his life's work—his mother.

Every great man has acknowledged what Lincoln so well expressed when he said: "All I am in life, I owe to my mother. God bless her."

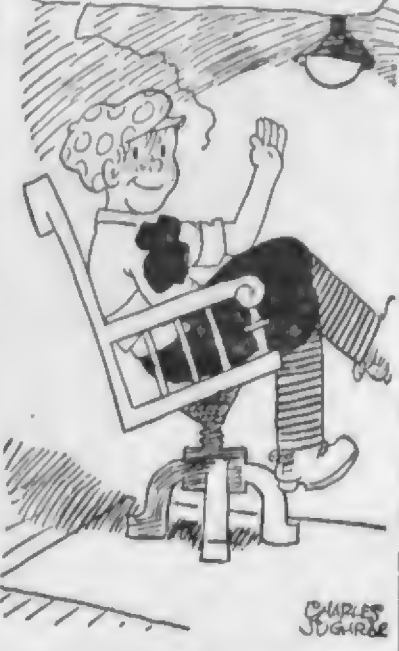

The tribute to the mothers of the land that welled up from all hearts last Sunday was unaffected and sincere. Many and wonderful are the thoughts which the mere mention of the name "Mother" recalls to the mind of one who has been favored by God with the guidance, direction and influence of a good mother. To her children such a mother is the embodiment of everything that is good and beautiful and true. She is the ideal and exemplar in childhood, the sharer of our joys and sorrows in maturer years, and the one whose gentle hand can best smooth the wrinkles from our brow or bring the smile quickest to our countenance.

There is no human power on earth stronger than a mother's love, no other influence so great. No sacrifice too great, no undertaking too vast, no task too hard for a mother to accomplish for the sake of her children.

To Mothers it is given to write the first lessons, to awaken the first ideas in the minds of her little children.

she will toil; for them who will live and for them who will die.

A Father may turn his back on his child; brothers and sisters may become inveterate enemies; husbands may desert their wives, and wives their husbands. But a mother's love endures through all. In good repute, in the face of the world's condemnation, a mother still loves on, and still hopes that her child may turn from his evil ways and repent. Still she remembers the infant smiles that once filled her bosom with rapture; the merry laugh, the joyful shout of his childhood, the promise of his youth; and she can never be brought to think him all unworthy. No language can express the power and beauty and heroism and majesty of a mother's love.

Knowing what our mothers have done for us and what they are capable of doing, how we should love and reverence them while they live, and how we should cherish their memory when they are gone. Today more than ever before in the history of the world should this duty of the love and reverence of parents be insisted upon. For the tendency today is away from the home, and the spirit of independence is abroad in the land. This has made for the decay of reverence for authority and the loss of filial piety. Mother's Day should bring home to all children, both young and old, the duty they owe to their parents.

To love them during life will bring no regrets after they are gone. The saddest words of tongue and pen are the words that tell of ungrateful sons and thoughtless daughters, breaking by their cold ingratitude and callous indifference a mother's loving heart. When the cold earth closes over a mother's clay, it is too late to offer love.

Many a great heartache can be avoided by a little thoughtfulness and many a great sorrow averted by patience and forbearance. The thankless child, thankless through deliberate malice, is rare, but the thankless child, thankless through thoughtlessness, is legion. If Mother's Day has any lesson to the sons of good mothers it certainly

Mixture of Races

The Welsh are a Celtic people. At the time of the coming of the Romans in 55 B. C. the natives of Wales represented a mixture of the primitive Iberians and the later invading Celts, all bearing the general name of Cymry. Afterward the Celtic inhabitants of Britain took refuge in Wales, where they were driven westward by the Anglo-Saxons. In time they merged with the natives.

Extend Pity to Fool

You pity a man who is lame or blind but you never pity him for being a fool, which is often a much greater misfortune.—Sydney Smith.

Is this, to try to exercise towards a mother the same patience, the same sacrifice, the same thoughtfulness and the same enduring love that she herself so lavishly extended, and to do this not only on Mother's Day but every day of the year, for to those who understand, every day is Mother's Day.

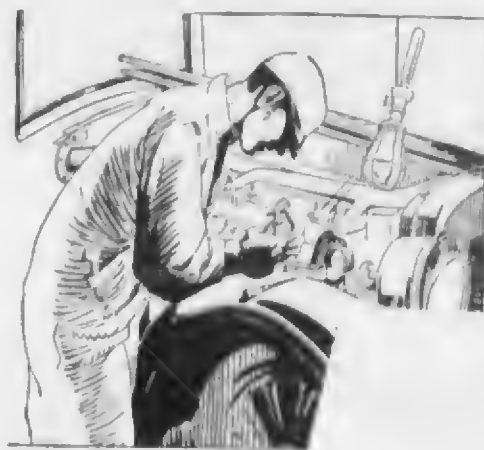

As she stands upon the western porch of life, the halo of the living God is gathered about her form; no soldier on the field of battle, no statesman in the halls of State, no mariner on the chartless seas, can claim a richer meed of praise, a larger share of honor. She is greater than the greatest painter because on the canvas of the souls of her children she paints pictures which shall live forever and forever. She is greater than the greatest poet because in the hearts of her children she writes poetry and sings songs which help to swell the anthems of the angel choir of God.

Home, sweet home—that charmed circle, where live and love the nearest and dearest friends on earth. Within that sacred cluster, she is the central Gem; in that garden of love, she is the sweetest Flower.

If she is gone before and is watching and waiting our coming, let us place tenderly where her dear dust lies the garlands of our loving memories, dedicating to her the white flower of holier living. If her presence still adds its light to our lives, let us not keep back the flowers to place upon her tomb, but give them into her living hands, that the tender graces of loving deeds may brighten life's afterglow as the shadows of evening fall.

LOON LAKE IN RUINS

Houses were destroyed. Workmen rushed into the main section of the greenhouse for protection and saved themselves from serious injury by clinging to the heavy radiator pipes in the end farthest from the storm. One laborer, Tom Miller, was slightly injured.

The four last house sections of the greenhouse, each valued at $3,000 to $4,000, and the heating plant were completely destroyed, and the main building badly wrecked. In the first section were many specimens of rare and exotic plants, only a few of which were saved.

At Round Lake the children were just ready to leave the school house when the cloudburst, which preceded the storm at that place, broke. Teachers detained the children and, when the wind struck and the build- ing began to sway, took refuge with the little folks in the basement. There they waited till the tornado passed, terrified by the sound of crashing timbers above as the roof of the building went off.

Many Travelers Caught on Roads

A school bus was caught in the open between Lake Villa and Grays- lake and the windows blown out but fortunately for the occupants the weight of the bus was sufficient to prevent it being upset. Many cases of travelers caught on the road and unable to seek cover because of the sudden approach of the storm were reported. In several instances cars were ditched or overturned but no serious injuries were reported. Cars caught on the road were unable to travel for some time after the storm because of the danger from high voltage wires which were broken in several places and lay stretched across the road. In many places telephone and electric light wires had fallen in such a manner as to obstruct the road. Trees blowing across electric light wires and caus- ing them to fall.

Legion auxiliary has requested the local Legion and Auxi- into the road or sag and all others as to be dangerous added to the confusion.

Electric light poles were snapped off and telephone and high power wires lay in confusion everywhere. It was late at night before the Pub- lic Service company was able to re- store conditions sufficiently to sup- ply Antioch and the surrounding region with power. Telephone com- munications with individuals resid- ing at or near the scene of the dis- aster are not yet complete.

Daily reports come in of lesser losses to farm and resort property and it is thought that when the loss is tallied hundreds of instances of losses will be found. That there was not a greater loss of life than resulted is one of the most amazing developments of the storm. Had it occurred a month later the loss of life at Loon Lake, where the large part of the destruction was in sum- mer property, not yet occupied the casualties would no doubt have been tremendous.

Restoration Already Begun

Fred Wolf, owner of the damaged ice house, was the first to get under way with the work of repair. Emergency crews worked Monday night and all day Tuesday to save the ice, which had been exposed by the tornado. Temporary repairs were completed but the building was so badly wrecked that Wolf will tear it down and build a new building as soon as the ice is used.

Rubbish Strewn Everywhere

The lakeside presented a strange appearance after the storm. With the usual freakishness of a tornado, objects apparently directly in the path of the storm were left un- touched, while buildings, furniture and all manner of household goods, boats, machinery, etc., standing right be- side unharmed articles, were either twisted beyond all recognition, re- duced to kindling wood, or so scattered that they could not be identified at all. Several boats disappeared en- tirely after plowing a heavy track in the ground where they were drag- ged by the force of the storm. Plowed fields nearby were sowed to kindling wood, pieces of siding and timbers from the houses being driven into the ground at every angle. Mattresses and wearing ap- parel were draped upon the branches of the remaining trees.

Great Losses to Kenosha Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. were torn from the ground and doubled up by the force of the tempest. The grave to the south of the lake suffered severely, more than half of the trees being destroyed.

Throngs Come to See Wreckage

The environs of Loon Lake pre- sented the appearance of a city boulevard Monday evening and all day Tuesday and Wednesday. The throng of people, curious to see the extent of the damage, mingled with owners of destroyed homes who had come out to identify their property and salvage it where pos- sible.

Slight Damage in Antioch
Antioch and the immediate vicinity was visited by a very heavy rain but escaped serious damage. About the only losses occurring were bro- ken plate glass windows at the Wil- liams Bros. Store, the Wetzel Cher- roiet sales room and Chase Webb's general store.
